

GENERAL NEWS.

Cleveland's Territorial Visitors—Indianaans Started for Home—The Russian Minister Looking for Cruisers.

No Further Fighting at Panama—Grant Still Gaining Strength—The Nicotine Theory.

A TERRITORIAL DELEGATION

Visit the President—Where Cleveland Will Spend the Summer.

Special to the Sentinel.
WASHINGTON, April 11.—A committee of the citizens of the territories have waited upon President Cleveland, and urged that he investigate the charges of corruption among Federal officials which they stand ready to substantiate. They have also urged him to act in accordance with the plank in the Chicago platform that only residents of Territories shall be appointed to Federal positions in their respective sections. The President was very much impressed with the home rule agitation, and has promised that the subject shall receive his early and prompt attention. It is understood that Mr. Grant has been well defined and positive views on the matter, and has stated that wherever corruption can be proven that the offender will be followed with prompt and sure punishment. His appointments to Territorial offices will be based upon a basis of honesty, efficiency and economy. In this he will be supported by all good citizens.

President Cleveland said to your correspondent this afternoon, in answer to a question as to where he would spend the summer: "I think I shall remain here all summer at hard work, if I can spare time from my labors I have not more than one week off, and that week I shall devote to fishing in the Adirondacks."

Russia Proposes to Purchase American Steamers.

Special to the Sentinel.
WASHINGTON, April 11.—While preparations for war are being actively carried forward in London and St. Petersburg, an incident came to light in Washington to-day that proves beyond doubt that the Representatives of these Governments in the Capital are by no means idle. Baron De Struve, the Russian Minister, has opened active negotiations with a very prominent officer of the American Navy, who served many years on the Pacific station. The object of the Russian Government is to obtain by purchase the large fleet of swift, staunch steamers, now engaged in the sugar carrying trade between the Sandwich Islands and this country, and also the fleet owned by the Alaska Fur Company. It is the intention of the Russian Government to concentrate these steamers at some given port, and to arm them, and to order them to prey on English commerce in Chinese and Japanese waters. The officer has the matter under consideration, and has declined to accept the offer. Secretary Whitney will not permit him to commit any breach of this Nation's neutrality. Pending the declaration of the Russian Government, no reason why the officer should not serve the Russian Government, as desired.

Indians in Washington.

Special to the Sentinel.
WASHINGTON, April 11.—Colonel William E. McLean has received his commission as First Deputy Commissioner of Pensions. Colonel McLean will enter upon the duties of his office next Monday. It can not be said that the Colonel will be a green officer. He has been for two weeks studying the routine work of the office, and should General Black be elected to the Senatorship from Illinois and the promotion to the Commissioner of Pensions, he will be thoroughly equipped to assume the duties.

Vice President Hendricks, Voorhees and Holman had a long interview with the President to-day with reference to the appointment of Internal Revenue Collectors for Indiana. They urged the appointment of Hamilton, of New Albany, Henderson, of Kokomo, and Dr. Hunter, of Lawrenceburg. The President intimated that these appointments would be made in the near future. Senator Voorhees, Major Chaslin and other prominent Indianaans left for home to-day.

NEWS OF NATIONAL INTEREST.

Ordered From Duty in Washington to San Antonio, Texas—Russian Minister's Intentions—Panama.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—General George D. Baggley, of the Adjutant General's office, on duty in Washington, has been ordered to duty at San Antonio, Tex., and General Thomas M. Vincent has been ordered from San Antonio to Omaha, Neb. The order goes into effect June 1.

It is stated on the authority of a naval officer that the Russian Minister to the United States has endeavored to secure the services of a naval officer here in purchasing a number of small vessels used between San Francisco and the Sandwich Islands in transporting sugar. The vessels are to be used, the officer says, in preying upon English commerce in Japanese and Indian waters should war be declared between Russia and England.

Admiral Jovett telegraphed Secretary Whitney to-day from Colon, Panama. The Tennessee arrived to-day. All well. I shall open the transit to-morrow and keep it open. Everything is quiet here but trouble is expected at Panama. I shall send 100 men to Panama to-morrow.

A committee of the colored citizens of the District of Columbia have waited upon the President to-day, and after inviting him to review the procession of colored societies on Emancipation Day, presented an address which embodied the following resolution:

"Resolved, That in the name of 70,000 colored citizens we ask from the Administration recognition according to merit equal rights and the advantage of education throughout the United States."

The President responded briefly and promised the colored people a just recognition of their rights. He said he would review their procession and, if possible, visit their entertainment and exercises in the evening.

Through an unofficial source, the Interior Department has been informed that the Crow, Cheyenne and Piegan Indians in Northern Wyoming, just south of the Crow reservation were preparing for an outbreak and that the white settlers in the vicinity were in danger.

The Secretary of the Navy, in obedience to the writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Cox Thursday, brought ex-surgeon General Philip S. Wales before Judge Cox to-day. Dr. Wales asks to be released from arrest, under which he was placed on March 2 by Secretary Chandler, pending his trial by Court Martial on charges of gross neglect of duty in the purchase of supplies. etc. Mr. Bonds, of counsel, read the petition for writ, including the order of Secretary Chandler, placing Dr. Wales under arrest and confining him to the limits of the city of Washington. At the conclusion of the argument the court announced that they would give a decision before the assembling of the court martial.

The British Government has requested that the Alert, which was used in the Greeley relief expedition, be sent to Halifax, where she will be received by the English authorities through which the ship, in Lake Michigan, through which the water agitation and robbing the city, by means of two tunnel. They found the river water and sewage three miles beyond the crib plainly visible, the crib-keeper estimating that they extended that far, and the discolored water apparently extended downward to the bottom of the lake. The subject is one of great interest, as affecting the health of the city.

GENERAL GRANT.

His Condition as Stated by His Physicians and Friends.

NEW YORK, April 11.—As Dr. Shady left the house this morning he said that General Grant had passed a very quiet night. He slept profoundly until 2 a. m. without the aid of an anodyne. At that hour he became somewhat restless and an opiate was administered, after which he slept until morning. He took nourishment as usual.

Senator Romero, with a valise in his hand, entered at 9:30, and Senator Chaffee followed close behind him.

At 10:50 Jesse Grant and wife, nurse and child, and Mrs. Bartlett left the house and boarded a Madison avenue car, going down town.

The feeling of safety enjoyed to-day by the family further evidenced by the fact that Mrs. Grant, nurse and child left the house and entered the park for a morning stroll. They returned at 11:45 a. m. A visitor to the house between 10 and 11 o'clock met the general's wife in the hall, and she invited him to go into the general's room and see him. General Grant was reclining, and the visitor was surprised to find him appearing so well.

Senator Chaffee, Senator Romero, Jesse and Fred Grant were present, and the general was taking nourishment at that time.

When Senator Chaffee left the house, at 10:30, he remarked that the pleasant weather had not brightened the general as much as anticipated.

His greatest regret when viewing the inevitable is that he is obliged to leave his family and life-long friends, and that the crowning work of his life is his last. He will be left incomplete in an unbalanced condition. Otherwise he feels his life work and mission is finished, and he is prepared to leave.

At 11:30 Dr. Shady returned. He said he thought he would not leave the general too long alone. Dr. Barker and Douglas would come at 2 p. m., at which time the Saturday consideration would take place. Dr. Bonds would not attend to-day.

Dr. Douglas arrived at 1:30, after having been away since last night. He will remain for the consultation with Drs. Barker and Douglas at 2 p. m., after which a bulletin will be had.

With reference to the rumors that the general had been delirious and had been talking incoherently, this statement, at 1 p. m., was made to one who called. At that instant the general was doing well. He had not been delirious. When he awoke he was at the moment in the dazed condition between profound sleep and wakefulness, but quickly the patient became clear of mind, and had been since.

No approach was made to-day of critical results to-day or to-night.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Senator Chaffee and General Grant left the house. General Grant's horse, star, Chaffee said: "The general is now comfortable and will probably pass an easy night."

At 10:30 the house was closed for the night. Once during the day the general arose from his chair and walked firmly across his room and returned without evidence of weakness or fatigue.

Later in the day the general again left his chair, walked into the hall, and passed along its entire length to Mrs. Grant's room, which is at the extreme end of the house. His room is in the apartment, the general sat down in a chair some minutes, conversing briefly in response to salutes upon his activity. Then he returned unaided to the sick room, where he resumed his chair without evident exhaustion.

The general's act is a sign, and he frequently intimated remarks that prove he has regained his intelligence and appreciative listener to the talk going on about him.

Another Theory.
WASHINGTON, April 11.—The clear dealer who supplied General Grant with cigars during his residence here has a new theory of the cause of the general's cancer. He says General Grant did not smoke very strong cigars nor half so many as has been generally supposed. The impression that he smoked constantly is due to his almost daily having a cigar in his mouth. A smoker's habit to keep a cigar in his mouth sometimes for an hour or two during conversation after the fire was extinguished. The dealer believes that the nicotine from cigars thus retained in the mouth was the origin of the general's disease.

Saturday's Bulletin.
NEW YORK, April 11.—8 a. m.—General Grant doing comfortably until 1 a. m., when he became restless and suffered from pain in his throat. The usual local applications were made, giving partial relief. At 2 a. m., however, the administration of anodyne was demanded.

At that time he was lying on his back, and was being turned by his wife. His pulse 88, temperature 99.5.

2:10 p. m.—At the visit of Dr. Barker and Shady at 2 p. m., General Grant was found in a comfortable condition. He has rested all the morning alternately on his bed and on his chair. Pulse 72, temperature normal.

3:30 p. m.—General Grant has been very quiet all the afternoon. He has been sitting in his room, surrounded by and conversing with his family for some time. Pulse 66, temperature normal. Has taken nourishment as usual.

5:30 p. m.—General Grant had, at 11 o'clock, a severe paroxysm of coughing with spasm of glottis, which was soon relieved. He is now sleeping. Pulse 72; regular.

J. H. DOUGLAS, M. D.

More Trouble on the Missouri Pacific.
GALVESTON, Tex., April 11.—The Galveston News special from Marshall, Tex., says a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Knights of Labor last night considered the new troubles between the machinery and the Missouri Pacific Railroad management in regard to shipping cars to St. Louis and sending other work from the Marshall shops, and the discharging men on the river.

A special committee was appointed to-day and waited upon Superintendent Cummings, and the latter refused to accede to the demands of the men. The committee will be in direct violation of the contract entered into by the management with the employees at the close of the strike, that the men should be allowed to discharge the workmen must cease to-day, or trains will be stopped to-morrow. Cummings agreed that no more broken cars should be shipped to-day. This arrangement satisfies the employees and ends the incipient troubles.

Body of a Murdered Man Found in a Stable.
JACKSON, Mich., April 11.—Late yesterday afternoon the body of a man, slightly decomposed and eaten by rats, was discovered under the manure in one of the stalls in the Franklin House stables. The skull was crushed, and the man had evidently been murdered and then hidden under the litter in the stall. The body has been identified as that of Henry H. Smith, a farmer near a large estate who sold out last December with the intention of going West. He has considerable money about his person, and he believed he was murdered for his money. There is considerable excitement in the city over the murder. A man named Halseid, a former partner of Smith, was arrested on suspicion this afternoon. The body was frozen, and it was evident the murder was committed some time ago.

Information Regarding Winter Wheat.
CHICAGO, April 11.—The Times presents this morning a variety of information in regard to the winter wheat crop. Dispatches from Kansas and Illinois agree upon the conditions which will lessen the yield one-half. Some portions of Ohio certainly hope for an average crop, while the central counties show a decreased acreage. Very little injury was done in Michigan. The wheat in the southern counties of Indiana. A crop of nearly 10,000 bushels is expected in Missouri, while the wheat acreage in Iowa will bring the product of that State down to 700,000 bushels.

Marine Probabilities and Possibilities in Case of War.
NEW YORK, April 11.—A Philadelphia correspondent of the Herald says: "It was stated to the writer this afternoon that the Gulton, Red Star and American Steamship Companies, had been approached by the British Admiralty for terms at which the vessels would be leased to that Government. Another agent went so far as to state that the British Navy claims upon the vessels of his line might be arrested at any hour. The vessels of the American Company all carry the British flag, under the statute that they are the only American built craft that can fly the flag of this nation. The agent said that the British Navy is interested in the aggressive warfare that was possible for her, this statute would prevent the American people from taking advantage of the splendid opportunity which is offered them by the British Navy for the retaining of their once prized position on the seas. He even suggested that, in the event of war, an entire session of Congress ought to be called to take advantage of a situation that may not recur again in a century. "America's future," he said, "belongs to her and she has stood long enough upon courtesy and the amenities of trade. She must regain what she lost during the four years enforced lethargy of the national commerce during the Civil War. The ocean trade was taken away from her fairly enough, but now is her chance. It is the hour for a great stroke, will she rise to it?"

MRS. POTTER ABROAD.

A New York Society Woman to do the Honors for America in Paris.

NEW YORK, April 11.—There is to be peculiar social brilliancy in the Paris establishment of our new Minister to France. Not since Judge Bigelow held the post has there been anything half so distinctive about the American representation there. Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way. Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the original, unique, and very independent Mrs. Bigelow kept court society in a condition of astonishment, and the stories of her exploits are still current in the French Capital. Her costumes were always oddly unfashionable, and she delighted above all things in breaking the rules of royal etiquette. On one occasion, having had Napoleon's box at the opera placed at her disposal, and, finding at the last moment that she had no dress, she sent her servant to fetch it in it. Her freaks were regarded as fair exhibits of Americanism, and so forgiven. She now lives in the neighborhood of the minister of Samuel J. Tilden's, and is as joyful and versatile as ever. Her husband is engaged in preparing for marriage the Hon. Robert C. Potter, Minister Melane's household in Paris is to be a lady equally distinguished in a radically different way.

Mrs. Potter, who is the wife of the Hon. Robert C. Potter, is the daughter of the late Hon. John C. Potter, and she is the wife of the